

21.9.2015 - “Although it may seem hopelessly distant, the dream of peace pulses in the lives of people everywhere.” – UN Secretary-General, Ban Ki-moon.

The UN Secretary-General calls on the international community to stand together and demand an end to the violence with the message, “Partnerships for Peace – Dignity for All.”

Since 1945, the United Nations has strived for peace to fulfill its founding purpose: “to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war”. Today, the UN’s message for peace is as important as it was 70 years ago. Conflicts, such as the ongoing crisis in Syria continue and according to the UN Refugee Agency (UNHCR) and 59.5 million people have been forcibly displaced worldwide.
