From 23 to 25 February, the United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon was in Africa. He first visited the Democratic Republic of the Congo where he met with President Joseph Kabila. The Secretary-General then headed to South Sudan where he met with President Salva Kiir. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon stressed the urgency of forming a Transitional Government, and visited a Protection of Civilians site for Internally Displaced Peoples in Juba. The Secretary-General's 'mission for humanity' will culminate in the first ever World Humanitarian Summit, taking place in Istanbul in May 2016.
