

24.05.2016 – The second session of the United Nations Environment Assembly \(UNEA-2\) takes place this week at UNEP headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya, under the overarching theme of delivering on the environmental dimension of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

The Assembly, which represents the world's highest-level decision-making body on the environment, will culminate in resolutions and a global call to action to address the critical environmental challenges facing the world today, including implementation of the 2030 Agenda and the Paris Agreement on Climate Change.

During the UNEA week, more than 40 special and side events, fora, and high-level dialogues, will cover a range of issues, such as climate change, gender and the environment, green jobs, air quality, Small Island Developing States (SIDS) and the sound management of chemicals, among other topics.

Each goal is a promise to the world, and each goal is a promise to the world. The 17 Sustainable Development Goals are a blueprint for achieving a better, more sustainable future for all. They address the economic, social and environmental challenges of our time. The goals are interconnected and indivisible, and they are all essential for creating a better world for all. The goals are a call to action for all countries and all people, and they are a promise to the world.
